

Each borough will soon be clearing the necessary space for their own Re-orientation Centre. These proud buildings, deploying the strategically placed architectural transparencies of an arts facility, will be managed by Britains' brightest and most creative professionals. The disciplinary power of contemporary art combined with other correctional techniques will re-orientate the community's disenfranchised. Priority will be given to art forms which allow the scope for full integration.